ONE OF THE CITY'S TRUE TREASURES

Fort Mason is one of the city's true treasures. It's full of fascinating museums, galleries, workshops, theaters and special exhibits....You could easily spend many hours poking around here....

San Francisco Chronicle
July 7, 1989

This is a truly amazing place. Fort Mason has become an institution so integral to our cultural life that people take it for granted, and cannot imagine the Bay Area without the Fort. Fifty residents and more than 450 nonresident groups use Fort Mason facilities each year, making it a hub of Northern California's arts, entertainment, environmental, media and advocacy activities. Its growth has been nothing less than phenomenal, and it has spawned imitators around the world.

The San Francisco Bay Guardian
May 24, 1989

KUDOS FOR COWELL: Imagine a beautiful, state-of-the-art theater set on the tip of a pier jutting into San Francisco Bay. Unbelievable? Not any more. Fort Mason's new Cowell Theater officially opened on Wednesday, April 26th amid much celebration and well-deserved congratulations.

The San Francisco Bay Guardian
May 3, 1989

Fort Mason: This swords-into-plowshares transformation of a drab and defunct military base into the country's most exuberant concentration of arts, culture, conservation, and community service organizations...is a model for cities everywhere. The new Cowell Theater rounds out Fort Mason's value as a rough-hewn cultural jewel.

Classics of San Francisco
San Francisco Focus Magazine
June 1989

Fort Mason Center, home to an eclectic mix of arts and community groups, could be a model for what happens to the Presidio when the Army moves out and the base becomes federal park land....(it) has become a national model for the conversion of military facilities to peacetime uses, copied in cities ranging from Sydney to Chicago.

San Francisco Chronicle
January 9, 1989

Another year of growth, excitement, accomplishment and planning for the future has passed at Fort Mason Center. The articles cited on this page communicate a part of what occurred here during 1989. However, it is difficult to fully represent the quality and diversity of activity that took place last year - either with photographs, headlines or editorial comment. That is one of Fort Mason's distinctive characteristics: it is more than the sum of its parts.

Last year witnessed events of every imaginable type. Poetry festivals; environmental conferences; garden shows and craft festivals; exhibits from many different countries and cultural groups; film, theater, dance and music; meetings of five people and gatherings of thousands.

Looking back on the year, we can feel both pride and relief. Pride over the completion of the extraordinary new Cowell Theater and the exciting mix and quality of productions that helped inaugurate its first season. Pride also that so often, when people talk about how the Presidio will be used once the Army leaves, they use Fort Mason as an example of successful conversion of an army base from military to peacetime use.

We feel relief that the long-awaited project that resulted in the redesign and paving of our parking lot is over - and that we now have 120 additional parking spaces for the public. Relief also that Fort Mason came through the October 17 earthquake in good shape and was able to resume operation so quickly.

It is important to emphasize that the success of Fort Mason can be attributed to the combined efforts of our fifty resident organizations, the 450 other organizations that use the Center each year, the public attending events and suggesting new ideas to us, the support of the media, the many generous financial supporters listed in these pages, the GGNRA staff, and the Fort Mason Foundation Board of Directors and staff. The needs and interests of each of these constituencies are always considered in decisions that affect Fort Mason today and into the future.

Events at Fort Mason The list of outstanding events continues to grow, with many returning year after year and many new ones added each year. Returning events included the Guardsmen Christmas Tree Sale, the San Francisco Landscape Garden Show, the San Francisco Art Institute Graduate Exhibition, the Friends of the San Francisco Public Library Giant Book Sale, the Reggae Explosion, the Pacific States Craft Fair, the San Francisco Blues Festival, the American Indian Arts and Crafts Show, Folk Art International, Macy's Passport to Fashion Show, the Free Folk Music Festival and the Third Annual National Poetry Week Festival. Media Alliance again hosted their Meritorious Achievement awards ceremony at Fort Mason, honoring many of the Bay Area's creative, persistent, and brave media personalities.

New events included the 37th Annual Orchid Show, the World Drum Festival, Asian Arts Alive dance festival, a Children's Animation Festival, the Black Arts Festival sponsored by the San Francisco African American Historical and Cultural Society, the first Museums Muster of Fort Mason Center museums and galleries, the Ocean Alliance's Holiday Splash, the Women's Building Arts and Crafts Fair, and too many more to list.

Resident and non-resident organizations at Fort Mason Fort Mason Center's fifty resident organizations have continued to grow in the depth and quality of their programs and audiences. Many are also growing in size, and we are endeavoring to accommodate their additional space requirements. Still, there has been room for one addition to our resident roster - the BayKeeper project of Ocean Alliance (formerly Oceanic Society's San Francisco Bay Chapter, now merged with the Whale Center). We all welcome them.

Among the 450 non-resident groups are many who have been producing events here for years, and others who came to the Center for the first time in 1989. The space that we reserve for use by these many organizations enables Fort Mason Center to respond to the changing interests, needs and ideas that make the San Francisco Bay Area such a vital and stimulating community to live in.

All the indicators regarding the Fort Mason program point to a very healthy, balanced and quality institution with its best years still to come.

Capital Improvements In 1989 we continued our efforts to raise the standard of Fort Mason Center's facilities to the level of the outstanding organizations and activities that we host. Some of the projects accomplished last year are more apparent than others, but each of them has a real impact on the public's experience at Fort Mason and what is possible within our facilities.

• The 440-seat Cowell Theater - a wonderfully designed, well-equipped, and busy performance space at the north end of Pier 2 - was completed in April. The decision to build the Cowell Theater was the result of dozens of performance groups identifying the need for a 400 to 500-seat performance space suitable for dance, theater, music and film. The funding community responded very supportively to this project (see Thank You list) and the result has been a truly exciting first season of performances.

• The Bayfront Gallery - a 400-foot-long exhibition space along the west side of the Herbst Pavilion (Pier 2) - has been the site of a number of unusual exhibitions, including "The Poet As Artist/Artist As Poet." It will be used in a manner similar to the way exhibition space at the San Francisco International Airport has been used.

• Site improvements during 1989 included the complete redesign and resurfacing of the parking lot. Not only did we achieve a much more coherent use of the space, but the 120 extra spaces, the bus turnaround, the new benches, the improved pedestrian separation, and additional lighting all make a difference in the public's experience at Fort Mason.

• Heating of the Herbst Pavilion (Pier 2) - a concern for many event producers - was achieved in 1989. This will not only increase comfort for the events that have used this space, but promises to attract many new events.

• Significant improvements to our meeting spaces in Landmark Building C make these rooms more functional for the many groups that use them each year.

Coming in 1990 A number of capital improvements will move us much closer to having the facility we have been planning for. They include:

• A new sign system for Fort Mason Center, designed to both improve the appearance of the site and make it easier for visitors to find their way around.

• Site improvements for individuals with impaired mobility. Included are new ramps to the buildings, improvements in the restrooms and a plan to install passenger elevators in each of the buildings.

• The heating of the Festival Pavilion (Pier 3), based on the success we are experiencing with this addition to the Herbst Pavilion. We hope to accomplish this in 1990.

Among the many significant projects in which our Board and staff will be involved in 1990 is the planning for the ultimate programmatic use of Pier 1. We expect to be given responsibility for incorporating this two-story, 50,000-square-foot building into the Fort Mason Center program in the near future. Its potential for enhancing the entire complex is enormous.

Fort Mason Center is now thirteen years old. There is at this time a very positive mix of both established and new groups using our facilities, return activities and first-time productions. Eleven new members who have joined our Board of Directors in the past two years complement the thirteen who have served from six to nine years.

There is continuity and stability, openness and opportunity for change; there are new ways of seeing Fort Mason. Throughout all the changes and successes, there have been the many people like you who have used Fort Mason for many different purposes since it opened in January 1977. We appreciate your interest and support for our programs and activities. We hope you recognize the vital role you have played in creating the cultural center that the quotes at the opening of this article praise so well.

Thank you.
